

PUBLIC LEDGER

PREMIUM FOR PATRONS.

A Word to Those Who Won't Understand What They Read.

When a merchant offers a premium to every person who buys $10 worth of his goods, it applies to persons who purchase after the premium is offered. It does not refer to those who have bought even ten times $10 worth at some previous time.

When a grocer gives you a guess on the number of beans in a bottle for every $1 worth of goods you buy, he doesn't mean that the man who bought $5 worth from him five years ago can come in and claim five guesses. It is for the customer who buys from him after the offer is made.

When a newspaper publisher offers premiums for new subscribers, he doesn't mean old subscribers. If he did he would say so.

THE LEDGER gives value received to every one of its patrons. They are furnished with a larger paper, containing more reading matter than any other local publication, and at the same price. It has followed the plan adopted by nearly every other paper in the United States of giving premiums for NEW subscribers; in one instance it is more liberal than any we know of, for it gives George Eliot's complete works to every old subscriber who renews and pays one year in advance.

Surely, if a farmer was to give us a fine ham it would be a trifle cheeky if we were to ask him to send it to us by express and prepay the charges.

Now is the time to subscribe! ANDY KELLY of Ashland, aged 14 and ought to have known better, jumped on a six-mile-an-hour C. and O. freight once too often. He fell off, and the doctors have been busy trying to put a new roof on him.

THE final dissolution of "Owens's Row" came yesterday. The last of the mansions which have for so long graced Bridge street took fire shortly before noon and in a short time was a blackened ruin. Colored people occupied the house, and one man was so sound asleep that he was aroused with difficulty. Neither loss nor insurance.

Why Not Use the Best?

"There are numerous preparations in the market for coughs, colds, croup and whooping-cough. Among them we wish to call your special attention to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is sold on its merits. This assertion is warranted by its sales, which surpass any preparation of a similar nature. I hear nothing but praise from customers who have used it." The above is what Eugene P. Unangst, the leading druggist of Bethlehem, Pa., says in a circular to his customers. He has sold at retail over one thousand bottles of this remedy during the past year, and knows it to be without an equal. The praise that naturally follows its introduction and use is what makes it popular. For sale by Power & Reynolds, druggists.

What a Horse Can Do.

A horse will travel 400 yards in four and one-half minutes at a walk, 400 yards in two minutes at a trot, 400 yards in one minute at a gallop. The usual work of a horse is taken at 35,000 pounds raised one foot per minute for eight hours per day. A horse will carry 250 pounds twenty-five miles per day of eight hours. An average draft horse will draw 1,000 pounds twenty-three miles per day on a level road, weight of a wagon included. The average weight of a horse is 1,000 pounds, and his strength is equivalent to that of five men. In a horse mill moving at three feet per second, track twenty-five feet diameter, he exerts with the machine the power of four and one-half horses. The greatest amount a horse can pull in a horizontal line is 300 pounds, but he can only do this momentarily; in continued exertion probably half of this is the limit. He attains his growth in five years, will live twenty-five, average sixteen years. A horse will live twenty-five days on water without solid food, seventeen days without eating or drinking, but only five days on solid food without drinking.

TIMELY ADVICE.
Upon a twig the robin trills
His cherry lay at dawn;
Unchained will soon be brooks and rills
And verdant grow the lawn.
The sun with warmth increasing glows
And health and strength restores;
The daffodil already blows
Beside the cottage doors.
But spring is like a woman still,
And changes oft her tune;
Stick to your winter dainties till
You see the rose of June.

A SMALL fire occurred about 5 o'clock this morning at the law office of L. W. Galbraith on Third street, next to the Courthouse. Beyond a hole burned in the roof the damage was trifling. ANOTHER CHAPTER.

A Sale Which Was Not a Sale—Our Street Cars Still Running.

Mason county knocks out the United States! Yesterday was the day advertised for the sale of the belongings of the Mayville Street Railway and Transfer Company.

Shortly after noon a small group of gentlemen was assembled at the barns in the East End.

Deputy United States Marshal L. M. Clark and several of those interested were on hand, and so was Sheriff J. C. Jefferson.

Mr. Clark announced the purpose of his presence, when Sheriff Jefferson asked his consideration of some papers which he handed him. The papers proved to be an injunction, granted by the Mason Circuit Court, restraining the Marshal from making the sale.

As the plaintiffs had refused to fortify Captain Clark with an indemnifying bond, it didn't require more than a pair of minutes to satisfy that gentleman that he was "between the devil and the deep blue sea," and he promptly notified Mr. Marvin's attorney that he proposed to obey the injunction. And so he hopped on a car, dropped his nickel in the slot and rode into the city.

Mayville people are familiar with the details of the suit of G. L. Marvin, Administrator of Marion Wilson, against the Street Railway Company. Wilson was run over by a car and killed while engaged in repairing the track. The suit was brought in the United States Court and tried at Covington last summer. A judgment was rendered against the railway people for $2,350, and it was to recover this amount that the property was to have been sold.

A suit was filed yesterday morning by J. F. Barbour, Trustee of the holders of the mortgage bonds, and an injunction granted, temporarily putting a quietus on the matter.

A bond was given in case the injunction should be dissolved, signed by J. F. Barbour, R. A. Cochran, Newton Cooper and W. H. Cox.

A GOVERNMENT THAT RAUPIES.

Postmaster General Bissell Learns a Thing or Two From a Reporter.

Washington Post.—Postmaster General Bissell was given a surprise yesterday. On Friday a local correspondent accompanied a Congressman to the Postal Department. The latter wished to secure a list of the Presidential offices in his state, with the salaries attached and expirations of the terms of present incumbents. The newspaper man, being thoroughly familiar with the workings of the office, made out the list and gave it to his friend. One of the employees complained to the Postmaster General, and the latter issued an order denying access to such information in future. Being told of it the correspondent repaired to Mr. Bissell's office and informed him that he intended to get the information and publish it. The latter replied that he had issued orders against it and it could not be done. Yesterday the correspondent showed him a copy of his paper, published on Sunday, which contained the list in full.

"Well," said the Postmaster General, "some clerk has been guilty of a plain violation of order. I can't stand that. He will be dismissed."

"It is not necessary," was the response. "You must know, Mr. Postmaster General, that you have no control over the Treasury Department."

"Certainly," replied Mr. Bissell.

"Well, the Sixth Auditor of the Treasury has the name of every Presidential Postmaster on your lists. He has their locations, their salaries and the dates upon which their terms expire. He entertains no objection to giving the information to any one who wishes it. This Government ramifies a good deal."

"Yes," said the high official, "I see it does."

JAKE P. NASH will on Saturday move his boarding-house and barber-shop to No. 227 Market street, West side.

It isn't altogether safe to say what the present aggregation at Frankfort has done or will do; but if its latest freak goes through the finishing process and stands, there will be 38 Senators' Districts, paired off as follows in this locality: Mason and Fleming, Lewis and Rowan, Bath and Carter.

THE Baltimore News, January 24th, says: "The Smugglers," a five-act melodrama by Augustine Wolford, was witnessed by one of the largest crowds of the season at the Howard Auditorium last night. It is a good play, and was well rendered by a competent competent company. Charles C. Maybury as Jack Hardy, the hero, was especially good, and J. P. Rutledge, as Captain of the smugglers and chief villain, and Miss Mayne Sheridan, as the heroine, also carried their parts well, and Charles E. Eldridge, as Conrad Giesmyer, relieved the blood-curdling character of the play by some clever German comedy. The play is well set, and some thrilling stage effects were produced, especially that portraying the burning of the vessel in mid ocean and the escape by means of the lifeboats."
